

Masters of Public Health Web Application

The Masters of Public Health Web application keeps track of student placements for four different programs. This application has been developed by students in the School of Computing but the Masters of Public Health would like to fine tune and expand on the current application, adding new functionality. Skills required for this project include web development (HTML, CSS, PHP, Javascript) and databases. You will be required to work with existing code.